(USA 2008 - COURTNEY HUNT - 97 MINS)

In the days before Christmas near a little-known border crossing on a reservation between New York State and Quebec, two women, one white, one Mohawk, are drawn into the world of smuggling illegals across the frozen waters of the St. Lawrence River. In this standout American independent film for which Melissa Leo received a Best Actress Oscar nomination, a single mother trades her minimum wage job at the Yankee Dollar store for the lure of fast money so she can make the final payment on a much-needed double-wide trailer for her and her two sons. What transpires is a cat-and-mouse game with a New York State Trooper who's watching her every move.
